

Women in Science and Engineering

The Arts & Sciences Libraries (ASL) permanent exhibit: Women in Science and Engineering, features photographs and biographies of famous women scientists. The exhibit, on display in the Science & Engineering Library (SEL), provides a visual statement to acknowledge the scientific and technical achievements of women. The current group of women featured in this revolving exhibit are:

 Anna Pell Wheeler (1883-1966) Mathematician Emminent scholar and educator; her research centered on functional analysis. First woman to deliver the prestigious Colloquium Lectures of the American Mathematical Society in 1927.	 Margaret Mead (1901-1978) Anthropologist Authority in cultural anthropology; best known for her research on the impact of culture on gender roles. A prolific and popular author, she published widely on issues including: family, race, and women in world cultures.	 Annie Jump Cannon (1863-1941) Astronomer Expert in spectrograms, she developed the star classification system; during her more than forty Harvard College Observatory, she cataloged over 350,000 stars.
 Rita Levi-Montalcini (b.1909) Biologist Researcher noted for her discoveries of the NGF (nerve growth factor) and the EGF (epidermal growth factor); winner of the 1986 Nobel Prize in medicine.	 Gertrude B. Elion (b.1918) Pharmacologist Researcher and inventor of drugs for the treatment of cancer, rheumatoid arthritis, herpes virus and kidney disease. 1988 Nobel prize winner in medicine for her development of azathioprine, a drug that prevents organ rejection in transplant patients.	 Chien-Shiung Wu (b. 1912) Nuclear Physicist Awarded the National Medal of Science in 1976 experimental work in the precise measurement various types of interactions, including: weak interaction, sickle cell anemia and X-rays and gamma rays atoms.

Women have contributed richly to the achievements of science and engineering in the United States. As pointed out by the National Women's History Project, it is unfortunate that many of these accomplishments have been forgotten, ignored, and even hidden as a result of cultural and social norms. Recent years have seen great strides in recognizing the contributions of women in all disciplines and fields of study.

The National Women's History Project has been one of the organizations to lead the way. The Women in Mathematics and Science poster and Outstanding Women in Math and Science photographic series were produced by the National Women's History Project (<http://www.nwhp.org/>) in Windsor, California.

SEL has also acquired the poster set, Inventive Women, which features the accomplishments and patents of eleven women inventors. A portrait of the inventor, a brief description of her achievements, and a list of five other women inventors in the same field comprise each poster. These posters are complemented by a poster which provides a narrative of the history of women inventors. (This series was also produced by the National Women's History Project and partially funded by a grant from AT&T.)
